Cover

The Quincy and Torch Lake is no more. George E. Anderson captured the solitude of this Q&TL water tank standing alone in Michigan's upper peninsula. I have always been fond of subtle understatement and I find the gentle colors and quiet feeling of this lonely water tank in the snow worth sharing with you. The painting is now in the collection of Richard Taylor who most graciously allowed it to be shared. Thanks are also due to Carlton Britt who provided the detailed photos from which the artist worked to complete the painting. Bob Brown.
